

WOULD CHANGE PLAN OF ANNEX TO CITY HALL

Town Meeting Endorses Proposed Bond Issue, But Would Build New Jail Instead of City Hall Annex

Following a thorough discussion of the proposal to issue $150,000 in bonds for the purpose of providing a new city hall and enlarging the present quarters of the city administration through the construction of an annex to the city hall, the town meeting held last evening at the Woman's club building under the auspices of the chamber of commerce went on record as favoring the issue but against the plan of building the annex. The ordinance embodying this bond issue and several others will come up before the city commission this morning for its second reading.

The sense of the meeting, as carried in the appointment of a committee to confer with the members of the city commission today, was that the ordinance should be changed to the extent that the commission shall be given some latitude in determining how the money of the bond issue shall be spent. When the subject had been discussed for some time it became apparent that the majority of those attending the meeting were of the opinion that instead of building an annex to the present city hall steps should be taken to house the city hall and the municipal court in a building which should be so designed and placed as to fit with the city's civic center plans. When this opinion had been given concrete form by a vote, a committee was appointed to confer with the city commission and work out, if possible, a method whereby the ordinance could be changed.

The session, which was well attended despite the rain, which fell during the early part of the evening, was presided over by C. M. Zander, chairman of the special committee having in charge the town meeting. When it had been called to order H. M. Fennimore was given an opportunity to speak briefly on the county division measure which will come before the voters at the November election. After explaining the provisions of the bill and referring in particular to the lack of any provision in the measure concerning how bonded indebtedness shall be apportioned in the event of new counties being formed after the passage of the bill, he asked to read the bill and, if they are then convinced of its viciousness, to work against it.

Report on City Hall Plan
Mr. Fennimore and several others, including representatives from Globe, met in conference over the bill yesterday and another meeting will be held at the chamber of commerce tomorrow, when definite steps to begin a campaign against it will be taken. The subject proper of the town meeting—the proposed $150,000 bond issue for a new city hall and larger city quarters—was then brought before the meeting by the reading of a report made by the town meeting committee which had been appointed to investigate the matter. This committee consisted of H. B. Wilkerson, Clyde Gandy, E. C. Phelps and F. W. Griffin, the report being read by Mr. Gandy. The substance of it was that the committee, after conferring with the city commissioners and other municipal officials, was in favor of the issue. It characterized the present quarters of the city administration as being totally inadequate and stigmatized the jail as a disgrace to the city. It also advised the selling of the city property when plans for a civic center have matured and declared that the civic center was desirable not only from the standpoint of the city, but also from that of the county as a whole.

In answer to a question after the reading of the report, Mayor W. H. Plunkett said that no matter what disposition might be made of the civic center idea, the sum of $150,000 must be spent immediately to afford the city even a minimum of relief and explained that $25,000 of the proposed amount will be spent in needed repairs to the old building and $125,000 in constructing the annex, which will face on Jefferson street.

Advocates Delay
Dr. J. R. Dennett, Jr., spoke against the expenditure of much money at this time and expressed the belief that a delay will mean that bonds may be sold at a greater advantage to the city. Guy P. Nevitt, followed with the declaration that he was against anything that might militate against the proposed city-county plan and agreed with Dr. Dennett concerning the financial end of the proposal.

J. A. R. Irvine, city commissioner, and Charles Donofrio also spoke, and then Harry Welch, secretary of the chamber of commerce, advanced the idea that after the repairs to the old building have been taken care of the sum of $125,000 be used in erecting a new jail and court room in consonance with the proposed civic center plan. Luke Henderson, city commissioner, then outlined the conditions in the city jail, which he characterized as disgraceful and gave several instances where it had militated against the good name of the city, especially in the case of three young women who were confined in it as federal witnesses under conditions which, the commissioner said, could hardly have been worse.

New Jail Much Needed
Judge E. W. Lewis declared the jail was shocking and a disgrace to any civilized community, and emphasized the fact that conditions there and in the city hall must be rectified. He favored the idea that the jail and municipal court should be built as a separate unit of the civic center plan. In discussing the plan he said that if city must get out and work for it, it expects any results and that if, on the contrary, the city and the county "pass the buck" back and forth Phoenix will not be any closer to a civic center five years from now than it was five years ago.

Other speakers then took up the discussion, the general sentiment being against the building of the annex to the present city hall. The discussion closed with the appointment of a committee to confer with the city commissioners this morning. That committee will include Judge E. W. Lewis, Guy P. Nevitt, Dr. J. R. Dennett, Jr., T. B. Stewart and John D. Loper.

City officials who were present at the town meeting and took part in the meeting were Mayor W. H. Plunkett, City Commissioners Luke Henderson and J. A. R. Irvine, H. B. Claffin, superintendent of the water department, and John Wagner, city auditor.

REMEMBERED PERFECTLY
"Good old college days" are not always convenient social assets. An alumnus recently invited a pretty young woman to dine with him at a restaurant near the campus. "I used to go there when I was at college," he explained. "And I'll show you something of the atmosphere we used to have." The young woman consented eagerly. "Ah," remarked the man as they sat down, "there's the fellow who used to wait on me." "Hello, Tony!" Tony greeted his customer enthusiastically. "See?" said the man. "Tony remembers me from the old days."

"Sure I remember him, miss," agreed Tony. "He used to come in here every noon with a different girl." (The Argonaut.)

BUT IS IT FAIR?
Said the weather prophet. "I think it is safest to predict bad weather."

"Why's that?"

"Well, people are ready to forgive you if you turn out to be wrong."

PHOENIX WILL OBSERVE 50TH BIRTHDAY TODAY

Cities, like men, have birthdays, for though their span of existence may stretch into the centuries, they must nevertheless reckon the flight of time by the same measure as men count the span of their own lives. Today Phoenix reaches its fiftieth milestone, which finds it in all the strength and vitality of youth as well as afflicted with the growing pains which all sturdy youngsters experience.

Fifty years ago today, on a site covered with greasewood and chaparral, the foundations for the town that was destined within a half century to grow to metropolitan proportions, to be the center of an agricultural district counted among the richest in the world and the capital of one of the greatest states in the Union, were laid. Missionaries had doubtless passed this way before, and venturesome white men had blazed for a time under the calm stars of the desert, but it was not until Jack Swilling deposited here his household goods and traced a shallow canal in the soft soil that a community of Americans was gathered together.

Trying days followed in a territory that was yet almost wholly savage, but the hamlet grew and prospered after a fashion. Years passed, and then came the miracle of water, when the gray desert was made to blossom as a rose, when the long stretches of level land became white with cotton, and when Phoenix, almost overnight, forgot it was a town and became a city.

To commemorate this birthday anniversary, the chamber of commerce has printed a large edition of its book, "Today," and for a week citizens have been sending it to their friends and relatives throughout the United States. It is the desire of the chamber of commerce that everyone in the city, if possible, send these booklets forth as messengers of the inland empire of which Phoenix is the capital. Booklet, mailing and postage cost only 20 cents, and hundreds are taking advantage of the opportunity by sending a dollar and a list of five names and addresses to the chamber of commerce, which will mail the booklets immediately upon receipt of the money.
